COUNTY 6TH IN PEAR GROWING

Fruit Production Increased
By 294,382 Bushels
During Five Years

El Dorado County is sixth in the growing of pears in the United States and fourth in the State of California.

This is a ratio which the county has maintained since 1930.

The county, sixth in 1930 in trees of bearing age, retains that position now, but an increase of 294,382 bushels in pear production has raised the county from a standing of ninth in the nation in this regard in 1929 to sixth position for the 1934 pear crop.

This is according to figures released this week by the U. S. Department of Commerce in a census of agriculture for 1935.

The sub-heading under "Pears" carries the notation that "three-fifths of the nation's pears are produced in the Pacific States" and makes the following comment:

"The Pacific Coast leads in the production of pears. California, Oregon and Washington, with about half of the pears of all ages, usually produce about three-fifths of the pears in the United States."

Listing the one hundred leading counties in number of pear trees of all ages, the report says that "twenty-seven of these are in California, ten in Oregon and nine in Washington."

"Yakima, Washington, with 1,340,731 trees in 1935, leads all counties in the United States in number of pear trees."

"Vogues Of '38 In Technicolor

Film Closes Tonight At Empire Theater; Baxter,
Joan Bennett Stars

A year ago Warner Baxter fought shy of Technicolor pictures.

But today he's as eager to get roles in color films as he once was to dodge them.

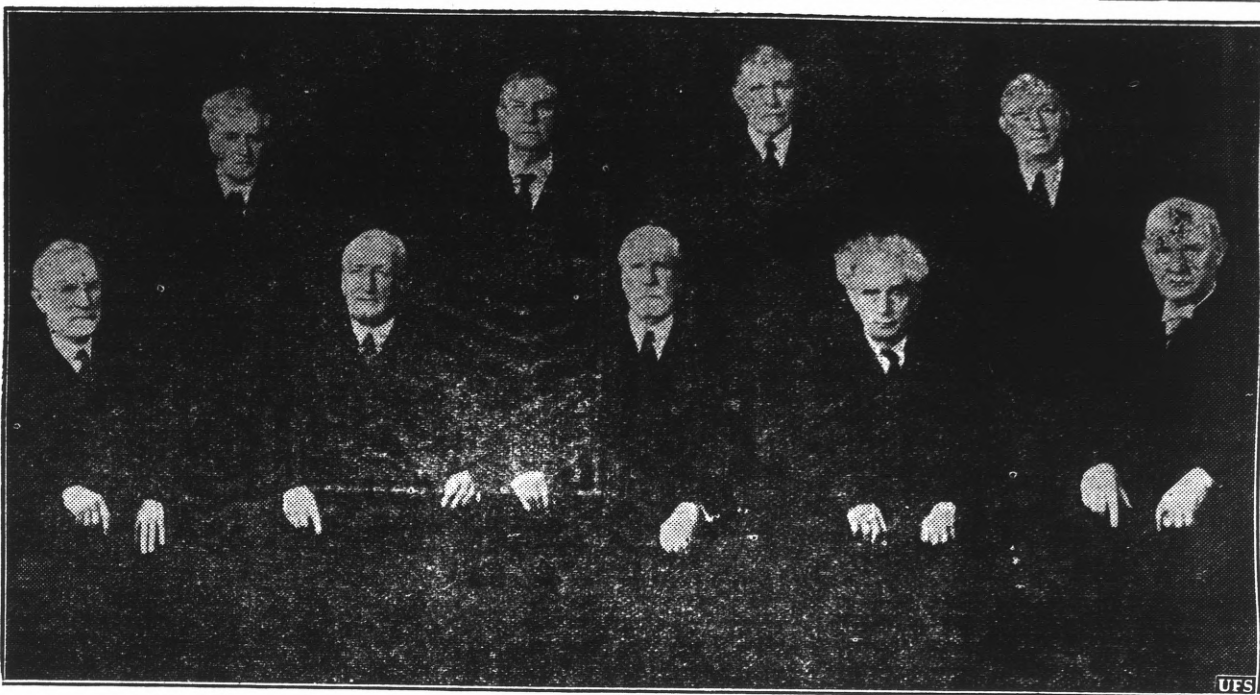

The reason for this abrupt about-face is "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938," the gay musical romance in the Technicolor in which Warner Baxter is co-starred with Joan Bennett at the Empire Theatre tonight. As soon as he saw the "rushes" in the projection room at the United Artists studio, Baxter changed his mind.

"Color pictures in the past were glorious achievements in color effects for sets and costumes," says the actor, "but all the actors looked as though they were in the throes of acute attacks of jaundice. I made up my mind that I would have no part of it."

"When Walter Wanger secured permission from Darryl Zanuck to use me for his 'Vogues of 1938,' and I found the production is released through United Artists.

that it was to be color, I had a swell case of jitters.

"Wanger, however, assured me that I had nothing to fear. 'Wait until Alexander Toluboff, my art director, gets through with you,' he said. Skeptically I waited and was nothing short of stunned with delight when I saw the results."

Red Cross Ends Roll Call

Officers Thank Workers For Support Given Chapter
In Enrollment Campaign

The Red Cross Roll Call for 1937 has ended.

The roll call was opened by El Dorado County Chapter for the three days of the county fair, November 5, 6, and 7, and was then closed to be resumed again on Armistice Day and continuing until Thanksgiving Day.

As the enrollment period closed, Mrs. Edwin Smith, secretary of the chapter, said a complete report on the success of the enrollment this year would be delayed for a few days until the reports of the various workers are received.

Any who have intended to enroll and have not been visited by Red Cross workers, may enroll by applying to the chapter officers if they so desire, it was stated.

On behalf of the chapter, Mrs. Smith expressed thanks to all workers for their co-operation in the Roll Call and spoke especially of the workers who assisted at the Red Cross tent at the county fair, and of the following district chairmen:

Mrs. Will Miller, at Gold Hill; Mrs. Don Hook, at Camino; Mrs. Amy Drysdale, at Georgetown; Mrs. Leland Hill, at Lake Valley; Clarence Scheiber, at Shingle; Arthur Hackwood, at the Big Canyon mine; Russell J. Wilson, at Garden Valley; H. P. Brown, at the Diamond Springs Lime Company; and the Placerville 20-30 Club.

Internal Revenue Department, Deputy Leo Garfinkle, will be here next week to assist employers, business and professional, who have not yet filed their Social Security returns for the prior months—which should be filed immediately—to avoid increased penalties, as provided by law.

If you will leave your name, address and phone number with the Placerville postmaster, Mr. Garfinkle will call and assist you in the preparation of the monthly returns to date. He will also give you any information on the subject, or on any other federal tax matter, that may be desired.

The Collector of Internal Revenue, 1st California District, the Honorable John V. Lewis, is glad to extend this special field service to taxpayers and hopes to receive 100 per cent co-operation from all employers, (not in the excepted classes) in compliance with the requirements of the Social Security Act.

2 Plead Guilty, Ask Probation

Forger, Man Possessing Gas Gun, Admit Guilt In Court On Friday

At arraignment in Superior Court on Friday morning before Judge George H. Thompson, admissions of guilt to felony charges were entered by two defendants and each entered a plea for probation.

The court referred the matters to the probation officer and designated Wednesday, December 1, at 3:30 o'clock as the day and time for receiving reports on the two cases and for passing sentence.

H. C. Lahrs, who was returned ten days ago from New York City by Sheriff George M. Smith following his arrest there, entered a plea of guilty to charges of forgery. Lahrs was charged with forging the name of his employer, A. L. Lampson, of Lake Valley, to checks aggregating about $200. He also is said to be wanted at Sacramento on a charge of issuing fictitious checks.

The quarter's transactions left the state with a general fund cash deficiency of $15,120,939.77. Officials have expressed confidence they will be operating on a cash basis shortly after the first of the year and will have the budget balanced by the time the general election in November, 1938.

DRAGON'S JAWS

PARADE OF SPORTS

By HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Writer)

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP) — Years ago, in a small Georgia town, there was a little, scrawny red-headed kid, with one big freckle for a face and one big baseball player for a hero.

The kid played baseball on a sandlot, with a twenty-five cent ball or a home made one of twine and covered with bicycle tape. His hero played major league baseball in Detroit with the Tigers and his name was Ty Cobb. Ty Cobb, the "Georgia peach."

Never did the kid hit the ball, usually a "roundhouse out," and scamper in his barefeet toward first base, that he didn't think of himself as Ty Cobb, thrilling the thousands with his dazzling play. The kid got licked for the number of pairs of pants he wore out trying to do hook slides into second in the approved Cobb fashion.

The great cross the kid had to bear in those days was the fact that he couldn't make it publicly known that he was Ty Cobb. He tried it once and his older and stronger brother punched him on the nose and said:

"Listen, I'm Ty Cobb, and you've gotta be somebody else." So the freckle-faced boy had to represent Hans Wagner, although in his head he never ceased to think of himself as Ty Cobb. He was that loyal. Once Santa Claus brought him a baseball game for Christmas. It was a big board, with cardboard discs bearing the names of the New York Giants and the Detroit Tigers. It was played by placing a "player" at bat, and then spinning a big arrow to see what the "player" did. The arrow might fall on a single, a double, a pop fly, a home run, a strike out, etc.

The kid tore the board up three days after Christmas when "Ty Cobb" went to bat three consecutive times without a hit.

The boy grew up, and Ty Cobb grew older. Other stars took Cobb's place in the headlines. The boy went to New York and got to know most of these stars. He met Babe Ruth and Rogers Hornsby and Lou Gehrig and Harry Hellmann and Herb Pennock and Carl Hubbell and all the other greats. He met Jack Dempsey and Bill Tilden and Gene Tunney and Tommy Hitchcock and Red Grange and Walter Hagen.

To all these champions he eventually asked one question.

"Did you know Ty Cobb, and what was he like?" The answers were many and varied, and the kid, now a man, kept hoping that some day he could meet Ty Cobb and see himself the man he believed to have no equal in sports.

Last night he met Ty Cobb. Had cocktails with him, dinner, and then spent the evening talking to him about sports.

As Ty Cobb talked, answering questions after question, the man who had hero-worshipped him from childhood did not see the retired, middle-aged Ty Cobb with the thinning hair, a

This & That

By The Tattletale

A paradox we could never fully understand concerns the Fascist philosophy which is at present used in Japan. Italy has 477 mouths to feed per square mile of arable land and Japan has 2,418 (the U. S., by contrast, has only 100) yet both continue to encourage an increase in population. Why these countries continue this philosophy in the face of increasing scarcity of space is beyond us, unless it can be explained by the argument that the more population they have the more land they will need and the more people they will have to send to get it. If it is true, as many writers and statesmen have maintained, that colonies not directly adjoining the mother country cost more to operate than they are worth, then the paradox becomes increasingly complex. It is still further complicated by the fact that as yet no colony has ever relieved the mother country of any sizeable load of population. We need only point to Korea and Manchuko (which are both owned by Japan) and our own government's experiment in Alaska to bear this out.

The real reason for colonies, of course, is to provide the hinterland with raw materials for its industrial plants (though this oft proves embarrassing when the colony competes with raw materials which can also be grown at home). But we still wonder, as we look at China and her struggle to feed and clothe her 400,000,000 of people, why Japan picked her out. They surely can't kill off enough to make any sizeable difference.

The fact does loom out rather brightly on the horizon of the Chino-Japan war, however, and that is a matter of history. History, after all, does little good of we can not apply what has happened in the past to what is happening at present or what will happen in the future—with reservations, of course. For untold centuries, this great land containing the largest ethnic group on the earth, has been invaded time and time again, only to emerge as a still larger mass. The Mongols invaded the land many and many times only to be absorbed—later came the Manchus who huddled the Great Wall and were in turn swallowed up as a river swallows a brook. Furthermore, all Chinese history has been marked by recurring periods of weakness and strength. Without a doubt the world is witnessing a period of that weakness today from which, if history does repeat itself, China will emerge as China again—probably more united, certainly a more dynamic nation of great power.

Without meaning to give offense to the clergy (some of our best friends are preachers) we would like to offer this little story for approval. We heard it in the stop-sign city the other day and thought it good enough to pass on. It concerns an English preacher who had a curious desire to see the inside of a pub (bar to you) and so took it upon himself to enter one. Now an Irishman, whose favorite beverage was a glass filled, half with milk and half with whiskey, was standing at the bar enjoying himself considerably. When the preacher entered, the Irishman left for some reason or another and left his drink behind. The minister, not wishing to be impolite, after glancing around and seeing the glass of milk, asked the bartender if he might have the same. The bartender, being a mischievous fellow, agreed and concocted the drink using his strongest whiskey. The minister tried it first, then drank it all with gusto. "Man, man," he said, as he put his glass down, "what a cow, what a cow!"

comfortable waistline, and double-breasted suit. He saw the "Georgia peach," in the gray of the Detroit Tigers, coming into second on a single, wide open, spikes high.

The tinkle of ice in the highball glasses became the roar of the thousands, and the cigarette smoke, the dust churned up by his flying steel.

A great many years have passed since I was the freckle-faced kid in Georgia, and it will be as many before I forget last night.

City Muffles Noisy Auto Horns

JACKSON, Miss., (UP) — Walter A. Scott, mayor for 21 years, hails eradication of automobile horn blowing and invites "all good citizens with jangled nerves from the blare or horns" to move here.

Scott attributed the success of the anti-noise campaign to a publicity and educational campaign before a city ordinance was passed nearly four months ago.

"Prior to that time, the main thoroughfares of the city were bedlams of noise emanating from motor vehicles," said the mayor, "either from horns or open mufflers."

COUNTY SIXTH IN PEAR GROWING

trees as well as in number of apple trees, having about three-fourths as many pears as apple trees. Placer, California, is second and Jackson, Oregon, third in number of pear trees.

"New York, with 17 of the leading 100 counties, and Michigan, with six, are the leading eastern pear states. New York ranks second among states in number of trees, California ranking first. Michigan occupies fifth place, being exceeded by Washington and Oregon in the order named. Other areas include six counties in Ohio, 7 in Pennsylvania, 4 in Illinois, 3 in Massachusetts, 2 each in Connecticut and Mississippi and one each in Alabama, Colorado, Louisiana, Missouri, New Jersey, Texas and Utah."

The report then proceeds to an itemized census of the total number of trees, the trees of bearing age and the production in the 100 leading counties.

In a summary for the entire country, the report shows that the total number of trees of all ages declined from 21,270,722 trees in 1930 to 19,436,137 trees in 1935.

Despite this decline, the number of trees of bearing age showed a slight gain, the total for 1930 being 16,042,533 as compared with 16,694,775 in 1935.

National pear production jumped from 18,500,447 bushels in 1929 to 25,629,249 in 1934.

While it is impossible to reproduce the census report for the one hundred counties in full, a review of the report for the first ten counties in number of trees may be of interest:

Yakima County (Washington) was first in the number of trees of all ages in 1930 and retains that record for 1935. It had 1,411,458 trees in 1930 and 1,340,731 in 1935. Yakima also was first in trees of bearing age in 1930 and retains that record in 1935. It had 920,766 bearing trees in 1930 and 1,141,284 in 1935. Second in production in 1929 with 1,744,088 bushels, Yakima is first in 1935 with 3,034,032 bushels.

Placer County (California) was third in number of trees of all ages in 1930 with 936,596 and was second in 1935 with 859,391. It was third in trees of bearing age in 1930 with 721,466 but was second in 1935 with 775,359. Sixth in production in 1929 with 558,597 bushels, Placer is seventh in 1934 with 717,606.

Jackson County (Oregon) was fifth in number of trees of all ages in 1930 with 764,770 and was third in 1935 with 832,707. It was fifth in number of bearing trees in 1930 with 568,314 and third in 1935 with 682,306. Jackson County's production was first in the nation in 1929 with 1,833,123 bushels and was second in 1934 with 1,741,492 bushels.

Santa Clara County (California) was fourth in total number of trees in 1930 with 844,230 and is fourth for 1935 with 785,779. It was fourth in bearing trees in 1930 with 610,383 and is fourth in 1935 with 663,408. Third in production in 1929 with 1,318,223 bushels, Santa Clara was third also in 1935 with 1,556,234 bushels.

Sacramento County was second in total number of trees in 1930 with 1,022,718 but dropped to fifth in 1935 with 625,724 trees. It was second in bearing trees in 1930 with 728,259 and fifth in 1935 with 536,505. Sacramento County's production was fourth in 1929 with 876,899 bushels and was fourth in 1934 with 990,711 bushels.

El Dorado County was sixth in number of trees in 1930 with 551,777 and was sixth in 1935 with 546,017. The county was sixth in trees of bearing age in 1930 with 424,622 and was sixth in 1935 with 486,811. ## GOP Racked As Leaders Struggle for Power

CONTEST FOR CONTROL—Approaching climax of the struggle between former President Herbert Hoover and former Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Presidential candidate, for control of the Republican Party is the proposed national mid-term convention. Mr. Hoover, staunchly supported by National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, wants such a conference to adopt a new platform for the 1938 Congressional elections and to make a new declaration of party policies. Opposition is led by Mr. Landon and former National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, with support from Colonel Frank Knox, 1936 candidate for Vice President; Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, 1940 Presidential hopeful; Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, and others.

SACRAMENTO, — With only 10,000 out of an estimated 50,000 California employers hiring four to seven persons have registered, the Unemployment Reserves Commission today has planned to renew its drive to obtain employment records of this group.

John F. Chambers, Oakland member of the Commission, announced registration is required before January 1, 1938, when employers of four or more employees will become subject to pay contributions to the Unemployment Trust Fund, as the result of an amendment made to the law by the 1937 session of the legislature.

"Severe penalties may be inflicted if the Commission deems this procedure necessary," Chambers said. "It is a misdemeanor not to register with the Commission, and aside from that, interest penalties on delinquent contributions are assessed at 12 per cent per year."

Chambers said registration forms may be obtained at any City Clerk's office, Chamber of Commerce, at the Regional offices of the Commission in Los Angeles and San Francisco, at the offices of California State Employment Service, as well as by writing the Commission in Sacramento.

"Prompt compliance in this matter will mutually protect employers and their employees with the provisions of this vital law," said Chambers.

BOY SMOKER WEANED FROM "FAGS" BY CANDY; TASTES BETTER

ONEONTA, N. Y., (UP)—When he was two years old, "Sonny" Yonson's nicks went for cigars. As a result he attracted nationwide attention as the child who smoked 10 cigars a day.

But now that he is 4, "Sonny" goes to a candy counter and spends his nickels for candy.

A state trooper, it seems, caused the boy to switch. After Sonny's name appeared in the news, the trooper went to the child and told him it was against the law for children of his age to smoke and that if he was ever caught at it, he would be thrown in jail.

That apparently was enough for "Sonny," who started his smoking career with cigarettes. When he found them to his liking he turned to cigars. And now that he is buying candy instead, he says that he misses neither the cigarettes nor the cigars.
